

Insync Provides State-Of-The-Art Technology Solutions for Newmark Education

Innovative New Schools for Children with Special Needs Blend Curriculum with Latest Technology

Fairview, New Jersey – October 15, 2013 -- Insync Outsourcing Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Insync Innovations, Inc., announced it has successfully completed providing comprehensive technology implementation and support for the Newmark Schools for children with special needs. The new schools opened in July 2013 in Scotch Plains, NJ.

Newmark blends technology into its curriculum, which provides an effective learning environment for children with Autism, ADD/ADHD, anxiety, Asperger's Syndrome, Bipolar Disorder, PPD-NOS, Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder, Oppositional Defiant Disorder, and Sensory Integration Disorder. The new schools were made possible by a $10 million capital campaign. Newmark Education board members include Duncan Niederauer, CEO of NYSE Euronext who, together with founders, Dr. Regina Peter, Cynthia Allman and their Capital Campaign Team, obtained the financial support necessary to make their vision a reality.

Michael Licameli, President of Insync, stated, “Newmark sought to offer special needs children the best technology available today. Technology, if harnessed properly, can profoundly impact learning progress, and Insync worked closely with the administration to infuse cutting edge systems and learning tools with their world class teaching. Newmark has been a long term client of Insync and we are gratified that they chose us to manage the technology component of this most worthy project.”

Newmark Education Co-Founder Dr. Regina Peter stated, “Insync managed every aspect of a complex project with specific deadlines and delivered on every item. Their attention to detail helped us open on time with all our technology functioning at a high level from Day 1. They are exceptional in what they do and we are grateful for this partnership.”

Insync assisted in all aspects of the technology for the new facility including: planning, purchasing, build-out, installation, conversion, configuration, deployment and training. Newmark is now a “Showcase Educational Model” for 21st Century “Interactive Learning” in large part due to a strategic partnership with Steelcase Inc., makers of Eno Interactive Whiteboards and Media:Scapes, all prominently integrated into the Newmark environment.
